Q2. to Q4. Read the passage and answer the questions:

There are many methods to search for extraterrestrial life. One is to listen for orderly, seemingly deliberate radio signals that could possibly be from sentient and technologically-able life-forms in our Milky Way or beyond. A second method is to search for planets that could harbour life as we know it. Over 4,000 ‘exo-planets’ have been discovered around other stars several of which are in the ‘Goldilocks zone.’ That is, at a distance from their host star that is not too close/hot nor too far/cold but just right to allow water to exist in liquid form and, therefore, harbour life of a familiar kind. Then there is in situ investigation, i.e., spacecraft landing on the planets (such as Curiosity-Rover to Mars). Robotic instruments on these crewless landers sample the planet’s atmosphere and surface material for evidence of life-nurturers like water, for “biosignatures” or chemical compounds that can’t be generated by astrophysical or geo-chemical processes and, therefore, must be generated by life-forms, and,

A fourth method, that ties in with the second, is to search for molecules of volatile “biosignatures” that float around in the planetary atmospheres, using telescopes. When these molecules are back-lit, even by the feeble light from the heated planetary surface, they absorb some of this light at specific wavelengths that are dependent on their make-up, amounting to a fingerprint stamped on the light. Phosphine is a molecule with a phosphorus atom bonded to three hydrogen atoms, a well-known toxic fumigant. It is very hard to make by natural processes, except under exceptionally high pressures and temperatures, in, for example, the core of Jupiter. However, living microorganisms in oxygen-less environments on earth are also known to generate phosphine, and it is, therefore, a clear, though relatively neglected biosignature.

Q2. Who according to the author, is able to transmit radio signals through space?

1 point

A. Intelligent life forms on other planets who are technologically advanced.

B. Conspiracy theorists living on other planets

C. Cranks who work out of Area 51 in the U.S.

D. Mystical saints who live in the Himalayas and are proficient in teleportation and radio signals.

Q3. Which qualities do NOT exist in the Goldilocks Zone?

1 point

A. They are at the right distance from their Sun, so that life forms do not burn up and die.

B. They have adequate heat and cold, so that they can have snow and sans

C. Their Sun or Host Star does not exist

D. The temperature of their atmosphere is just right for vapour to liquefy into water and harbour life.

Q4. Which option is closest in meaning to ‘exo-planet’?

1 point

A. An extraordinary planet moving around Jupiter.

B. A new planet that was discovered recently.

C. The exodus of planets from the solar system that is likely to destroy the universe.

D. A planet which is outside the Earth’s solar system.

Q5. to Q.8 Read the passage and answer the questions:

Today, silent reading is the norm. The majority of us bottle the words in our heads as if sitting in the hushed confines of a library. Reading out loud is largely reserved for bedtime stories and performances.

New research, however, suggests that we may be missing out by reading only with the voices inside our minds. The ancient art of reading aloud has a number of benefits for adults, from helping improve our memories and understand complex texts, to strengthening emotional bonds between people. And far from being a rare or bygone activity, it is still surprisingly common in modern life. Many of us intuitively use it as a convenient tool for making sense of the written word, and are just not aware of it.

Colin MacLeod, a psychologist at the University of Waterloo in Canada, has made an extensive research on impact of reading aloud on memory. He and his collaborators have shown that people consistently remember words and texts better if they read them aloud than if they read them silently. This memory-boosting effect of reading aloud is particularly strong in children, but is beneficial for older people too.

Q5. Which of the following is a by-product of reading silently?

1 point

- A. Having conflicts with people
- B. Developing verbal ability
- C. Having a prodigious intellect
- D. Having poor recall

Q6. With reference to the passage above, which option is closest in meaning to the following sentence segment-

“Bottle the words in our heads as if sitting in an imaginary library”?

20. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions based on it.

Music can be described in terms of many genres and styles which often overlap. Attempts to classify particular musicians in a single genre are sometimes ill-founded as they may produce music in a variety of genres over time or even within a single piece. Some genre labels are quite vague, and may be contrived by critics; post-rock, for example, is a term devised and defined by Simon Reynolds. We also find that new genres are introduced regularly and the understanding of the existing genres also change with time. Accordingly musicians can also change genres and adopt new ones. Dividing music by genre does make it easier to trace threads through music history, and makes it easier for individuals to find artists that they enjoy but undoubtedly categorizing musicians by music genres is an uphill task.

Question- Which of the following is the main idea of the passage?

1 point

- A. People use music in different ways.
- B. Classification of musicians based on music genres is difficult.
- C. Popular music can be of different genres.

Read the passage and answer the following questions (Q11-Q14).

Mental health can affect daily living, relationships and physical health. Factors in people's lives, interpersonal connections and biological factors can all contribute to mental health disruptions. Looking after mental health can preserve a person's ability to enjoy life. Doing this involves reaching a balance between life activities, responsibilities and efforts to achieve psychological resilience. Conditions such as stress, depression and anxiety can all affect mental health and disrupt a person's routine. Although mental health is in everyday use, many conditions that doctors recognize as psychological disorders have physical roots.

Mental health is about not only avoiding active conditions but also looking after ongoing wellness and happiness. Preserving and restoring mental health is crucial on an individual basis and throughout different communities and societies the world over. In the United States, the National Alliance on Mental Illnesses estimates that almost 1 in 5 adults experience mental health problems each year.

According to the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH), in 2017, an estimated 11.2 million adults in the US or about 4.5 % of adults, had a severe psychological condition. Everyone has some risk of developing a mental health disorder, no matter their age, sex, income or ethnicity. In the US and much of the developed world, mental health disorders are one of the leading causes of disability. Social and financial circumstances, biological factors, and lifestyle choices can all shape a person's mental well-being. A large proportion of people with a mental health disorder have more than one condition at a time. It is important to note that good mental health depends on a delicate balance of factors and that several elements of life and the world at large can work together to contribute to disorders.

Q11. What is understood by 'mental health disruptions'?

1 point

- A. Abnormal functioning of the mind
- B. Extreme illness of the mind and the body
- C. Disorientation of the brain
- D. Lack of coordination between the brain and other parts of the body

Q12. Which is not true according to the passage?

1 point

- A. Social and financial circumstances, biological factors, and lifestyle choices cannot shape a person's mental health.
- B. Mental health involves reaching a balance between life activities, responsibilities and efforts to achieve psychological resilience.
- C. Preserving and restoring mental health is crucial on an individual basis, as well as throughout different communities and societies the world over.
- D. Mental health is about not only avoiding active conditions, but also looking after ongoing wellness and happiness.

Q13. What is the tone of the passage?

1 point

- A. Prescribing
- B. Incendiary
- C. Laudatory
- D. Analytical

Q14. What do you mean by "Mental health is about not only avoiding active conditions but also looking after ongoing wellness and happiness"?

- A. Mental health care is about looking after ongoing wellness and happiness on a day-to-day basis.
- B. Mental health care is about treatment of active mental health disruptions as well as general mental well-being.
- C. Mental health care is not about taking care of mental disruptions but bodily diseases.
- D. Mental health care is about avoiding active mental disruptions only.

Q1 to Q2: Read the Passage given below and answer questions

It used to be the American shopper that exemplified the state of the world economy. The focus now should be on the person on the other side of the till. America's retail industry is huge: it employs 15.9 Mn workers, who represent one in nine American jobs. It is also undergoing wrenching change, as e-commerce eats into sales. There is no more pressing test of society's ability to cope with technology's impact on work.

That impact is already visible. For all the benefits that online retailing brings to consumers, it is causing immense pain to offline rivals. Last year 4,000 American stores closed; this year more than twice that number may shutter. Standard & Poor's, a rating agency, expects retail defaults this year to outnumber those in 2009, at the height of the global recession. Some formats—discount stores, groceries, high-end malls—will continue to thrive. But many will shrink. The industry has shed 50,000 net jobs since January. Department stores may need to close more than 800 stores to reach the productivity levels of 2006. Many outlets are looking for ways to cut labour costs by embracing automation.

Q1. This passage is mainly about

1 point

- A. Those who regularly do their shipping online.
- B. Those who run large businesses and retail stores.
- C. Those who run smaller retail shops.
- D. Those who cannot afford to buy anything in large retail shops.

Q5 to Q9: Read the passage given below and answer questions

Twinkling lights are just visible behind screens where staff are putting the finishing touches to this year's Christmas displays, but in other parts of the shop, the lights are still off. John Lewis's flagship store in Oxford Street, central London, is bearing the scars of the pandemic.

A restaurant and cafe are closed and there are more staff than customers on the furnishings floor. The fashion floor is also a depressing sight, with tags flagging big discounts on racks of unwanted dresses and office wear. Last week it emerged John Lewis had applied for planning permission to convert entire floors of this shop into office space. It's not hard to see why.

John Lewis, with its employee ownership and reputation for stellar customer service, still holds a special place in shoppers' hearts. But while sister chain Waitrose, along with other supermarkets, has thrived in the pandemic, results published last week show the department store chain is in deep trouble. Huge changes in shopper behaviour, which have been accelerated by coronavirus, mean the John Lewis website is now responsible for 60% of the chain's sales – up from 30% pre-Covid. This tilt towards the web means the department stores, as properties, are now deemed to be worth nearly £500 Mn less than before – a reassessment in last week's results that sent the group crashing £635 Mn into the red in the first half of its financial year.

Q5. Which one of the following is NOT a scar of the pandemic?

1 point

- A. More floors converted to office space
- B. Putting finishing touches to festive decorations
